All faculty members, research scholars and students (PG) from different disciplines are cordially invited to participate and present a paper on any one of the sub-themes.

Focal Theme

Margaret Mead once rightly said that "We won't have a society if we destroy the environment" because it is the environment on which we the humans are entirely dependent.

Environment- what surrounds us-has been the life giver and the sustainer. The four major components of the environment- the physical, biotic, social and cultural aspect have encompassed us since the inception of life. Creation had struck a balance to create harmony between Nature and Man. But over the years "change" as the only constant force, has resulted in degeneration and degradation. The growth in human population has resulted in rapid breakdown of the environmental balance and humans are largely indifferent to the conservation of resources that have sustained them.

The objective of this conference is to bring out the various perspectives of the environment which is serving us from the dawn of civilization. Moreover, its exposure through the bounties of natural gifts, not only benefitted us, but also indirectly made us liable to protect it. The conference delves deep into constant changes in the economy and associated global politics and talks about the factors creating pressure and affecting the environment. By identifying the challenges, the conference will help in exhibiting certain avenues to reach a better and sustainable future by creating a greener eco-friendly environment. Finally, it is also a reminder about the need to preserve the environment so that we can save ourselves from danger and destruction. It subtly drives home the message that "Progress is impossible without change and those who cannot change their minds, cannot change anything."
